

WEATHER ALERT

Monday Afternoon Update...No real changes to the morning forecast. While a couple scattered snow (perhaps mixed with rain) showers will be around beginning during the late evening (may even just be a flurry or sprinkle), overall it's more dry than not. The main time frame we're watching for snow to begin filling in and becoming more widespread and steadier is after 3 or 4 AM as the coastal system strengthens to our east. This is the better time frame to see accumulations (around an inch total on average) but mainly light intensity and marginal temps will mean that pavements struggle to accumulate and likely can be handled with just salt. Snow will be slow to completely exit Tuesday morning, but after 9 or 10 AM the risk to pavements drops significantly with temps warming into the 40s with partial sun returning in the afternoon.

OVERVIEW
Start Time	End Time	Total	Snow Confidence
Monday 8:00 PM - 11:00 PM Steadiest snow after 3-4 AM	Tuesday 8:00 AM - 11:00 AM	0.5 - 2.0" Snow Less on pavements	No Accumulation	10%
			Coating - 0.5"	30%
			0.5 - 2.0"	50%
			2.0 - 5.0"	10%

HAZARDS
Hazard	Threat	Description
Ice	Minimal	Temps struggle to reach 32, icing unlikely
Snowfall Rate	Low	Snow is mainly light, but can have moderate bursts mainly after 3-4 AM.

FORECAST
Monday	Mostly cloudy with a sprinkle (perhaps a few wet snowflakes) becoming possible towards or after sunset. High 39 - 44 NE winds 5 - 15 mph
Mon Night	Intermittent and scattered light snow showers during the evening (can still be mixed with rain early) tries to becomes steadier at times after 3 or 4 AM. Coating - 1.0" of Snow Temps during snow 32 - 35 NE winds shift NW 7 - 17 mph
Tuesday	Snow tapers off to flurries 8-11 AM, then clouds give way to some peeks of afternoon sun. Breezy. 0.5 - 2.0" of Snow (Storm Total. Less on pavements) High 40 - 45 NW winds 10 - 20 mph, gusts to 30 mph
Tue Night	Partly cloudy. Breezy, especially early on. Low 24 - 28
Wednesday	Partly to mostly cloudy with a scattered snow shower threatening at times, mainly during the afternoon. Breezy. 25% chance for a Scattered Coating - 0.5" of Snow (Pavement risk mainly towards sunset) High around 40

Forecaster: Mark Miller

Next Update: As necessary